Sicily is a land that offers an endless number of chromatic nuances. There's the bright yellow of lemon, citron and bergamot; the energetic orange of mandarin, oranges and the almost forgotten "chinotto;" and the intense pink of grapefruit. Still today, citrus is seen as a source of important vitamins and healthy energy, and this is also thanks to the wide range of colors it offers. A fresh-squeezed selection of energetic shades enlivens a natural, aromatic palette that, combined with the especially sweet smelling scent of orange blossoms, transforms the island into a delectable botanical garden. A real cure-all for the mood that pulls accessories into its lively whirl-
